

I happily pay my hard-earned money to receive XM Radio as an elternative to the endless junk that often clutters the normal airwaves (and drove me to XM). It does have a wide variety of material, although it has several stations I listen to most often that offer news and information I do not get anywhere else. On a recent trip to New York from Washington, DC, for example, my wife, three children and I even benefited from XM's traffic and weather channels. We now are all strong supporters of XM and what it offers. As long as we are prepared to pay money for this unique service, I cannot comprehend how the NAB could ask you to restrict XM and free enterprise by the implementation of HR 4026.

Respectfully yours,

Richard Mackenzie.
